Basic Features of Prohibited Schemes like Pyramid Structures include

- A higher return is promised either when number of participants increase or contribution increases.
- Often makes false promises about exceptionally high returns and other benefits.
- Products offered through the scheme do not have a strong market demand and often do not have a secondary market.
- Guarantees or after sales services are not provided for the products.
- Return from the scheme varies with the number of new recruits brought in by a participant, but not with his/her sales volume.
- Entry fee is often high.
- No Buy-back Policy for remaining unsold products, when a participant quits the scheme.
- Focus on selling product is very little and the main motive is to recruit more new participants.
- Hastily recruits new participants providing lucrative deals and make sure that the time is insufficient for the participant to think twice.
- Usually, the offer to join comes as an easy job which requires little or no experience or qualifications.
- Generally, it is a trusted friend or a family member that tries to recruit you, since it is very hard to resist the offer.
- Information about the scheme, its whereabouts, contact details etc. are generally inaccessible.
